

OAT RETIRES AND PRATT TAKES OVER POSTOFFICE

J. M. OAT, RETIRING POSTMASTER.

After twelve years of service in handling the mails of the Islands, J. M. Oat retired last night as postmaster for Honolulu, giving way to J. G. Pratt, President Roosevelt's appointee.

The change of officials took place last night, when all mail matters for the day had been ended, so that Mr. Pratt will start fresh this morning with the mails to arrive from Kauai and Maui.

Mr. Oat has had the privilege of serving as Postmaster-General under the Republic of Hawaii, then during the interim between annexation and the organization of the Territorial government, and since June, 1900, as postmaster for Honolulu. Mr. Oat has been an efficient officer, and during his term has won the esteem and confidence of residents. That he was regarded as a good postal official is evidenced by the fact that when the recent campaign was on to secure the postmastership, business men came forward willingly and petitioned the President to retain him in office.

Mr. Pratt has been one of Honolulu's business men, with real estate as his forte. He came here from Wyoming. Mr. Pratt was sent to Washington by the Chamber of Commerce to look after the fire claims. He worked energetically with Congress and succeeded in landing a million dollars to the benefit of the local claimants.

NO REFLECTION ON ATTORNEY KINNEY

Honolulu, T. H., April 29, 1905.

Editor Advertiser: Will you kindly give me space to state a word in regard to the report in the Advertiser of Friday with regard to my testimony on direct examination by Mr. E. B. McClanahan, in the case now on trial entitled W. R. Castle, Trustee, vs. Kapiolani Estate, Limited. The account itself is correct as far as a synopsis of the testimony can be, but the headlines would give the impression to a hasty reader, that the acts of W. A. Kinney formerly of the firm of Kinney, McClanahan and Bigelow, are impugned as a breach of good faith.

I think it is only fair to Mr. Kinney to state that I intended to convey no such impression and the whole testimony as given would show no blame put upon Mr. Kinney. Mr. Kinney has always stood by his stipulation and those of his firm.

In this particular case he was away from Oahu when the motion to dismiss the appeal was made and did not return till after the argument on appeal in the Supreme Court, and then when I called his attention to the matter, said that he did not approve of the act.

Respectfully Yours,
P. L. WEAVER.

THE WESTERN WAY

When the earth is palled with purple and the sea is molten gold,
When the far hills stand in glorified array,
The eye will wistful wander as night's twilight wings unfold,
Down the sun-trail of the wondrous Western Way.

Bravely lures the golden pageant, beckons smilingly each cloud—
The little clouds that float like crimson fleecy,
And the wind out of the west seductive whispereth aloud
Of guerdons for the seeking, and of peace.

Strong hearts are they that fall beneath the red west's magic spell—
Bold heart, clear brain and ever-willing hand;
They travel down the Western Way to what they cannot tell,
And why they go but they may understand.

And while the humming cities teem and hearts beat brave and free,
And while the wanderlust man's course can sway,
The sun-trail will be peopled and the Flag of Liberty
Be further borne along the Western Way.

—H. M. AYRES.

THE SIMPLON, THROUGH WHICH THE LONGEST TUNNEL IN THE WORLD HAS JUST BEEN PIERCED.

The photograph shows (1) the entrance to the Simplon Tunnel; and (2) the mouth of the service tunnel used to carry away the debris; this last is two and three-quarter miles long. Only about sixty yards of the tunnel remain to be pierced.

HEINZ Has Solved The Cold Meat Problem

There is a big waste in cold meat. The world wastes millions of dollars worth of cold meat every year. This cold meat is good, nourishing food, but nevertheless, the appetite has to be coaxed into considering it.

HEINZ 57 VARIETIES of good things for the table contain many things that go well with cold meat—and make it go well: Sauces, Catsups, Chutneys, Relishes, Pickles, Horseradish, Mustard, Vinegar, etc.

So good are the HEINZ products that your grocer returns their money to all who don't think them better than anything else they have tasted.
